The Nursery.

There is no philosopher like the one in pinafore and shirt sleeves, with a cake in one hand and a toy in the other. He has you into the secret of the human heart as no other teacher can. He is wedded to no particular sect, nor is his mind warped by pride or prejudice. He deals pertinaciously with first rudiments, and goes to the very bottom of every subject that he handles. But his greater merit is that he is so honest and straightforward in all that he says and does, that you can not more harbor a doubt of him than you can of the honesty of a ray of sunlight. And then his mode of teaching is so original, impromptu and felicitous, that he will manage to send a whole sermon home to your heart before you know it. He is no pedagogue, diplomatic, Talleyrand of a man, using words to conceal his meaning, but a veritable unmistakable Christian gentleman, who is the very soul of honor, and whose word is as good as his bond. He is as true as a kitten, deals in no flattery or dissimulation, never acts a borrowed part, and hardly knows the meaning of falsehood. He is a very close student of nature. He is no politician, but he is a philosopher, and he knows the hidden springs of things around him, and like other great students is a little dangerous at times, but he is perfectly fair about it, being quite as ready to blow himself up as to blow up those about him.

His, too, is the only standard theology. There is no snail of the lamp or of the mold about the doctrines he inculcates. If there is any virtue extant, it is in him. His little feet seem to tread right on the verge of the better land. And when he sleeps he seems to be there altogether. Of all the dwellers here below, he is the most reverent and devout. Devotion comes so easy and natural to him, as that he looks down on you entirely in accord with all you tell him of his home beyond the skies, and no one can hardly divine from whence came our old-fashioned notions about total depravity and original sin, unless they were wrought out by incantation in some old monastery whose cloistered walls never gave back the reverberating notes of nursery hymns and nursery prayers. Instead of quoting them as the doctrines of the "Fathers," he seems to mortal ken marvelously more like the surly growlings of grand and grim bachelor uncles. King Herod might far better stand sponsor to most of them.

The bench and bar have been far more attentive students than those who minister at the altar of the rich and rare lore of the nursery. Half the jurisprudence of the world comes from that source. Your little one in ankle ties is naturally a Lord Chancellor in all but the gown and wig. Long before he can walk, he has mastered the true doctrine in all that relate to meum and tuum. He starts in life fully appreciating the point that possession is nine-tenths of the law, and hence it is that he is so prompt to lay claim to and seize every toy and goodie that comes in his way. His plan of making the seizure is Napoleonic, by rapid advances, and instant taking, and to hold on till dispossessed by superior title. He relies very little on strategy, but "first in time—first in right" is a doctrine apparently as well understood in the Nursery as in Westminster Hall. He is a very early ally alive to the importance of taking instant delivery of everything that belongs to him, to complete the title, and it is seldom that he lets enough time to intervene between the gift and his seizure of it, to let in intervening claimants.

He is by nature prompt and apt as a savior, laying hold of and securing any and all last minutes and playthings found suitable, and instituting proceedings against them in rem for his share as savior forthwith. It is all idle for one to be spending his time consulting those old tomes of Puffendorf, Bynkershoek and other publicists, on the long mooted question of the origin of property when the little professor of public law in your nursery is lecturing on it every day. Young hope is one of the most ripe and ready scholars in all that relates to descent and consanguinity. Your laws of primogeniture find no support in the enlightened forum of the nursery.

He is never in doubt about his being full co-heir and joint legatee in all bequests of a palatable nature brought within his precinct. Nor is he slow in asserting his rights and instituting proceedings against them in rem for his share as savior forthwith. It is all idle for one to be spending his time consulting those old tomes of Puffendorf, Bynkershoek and other publicists, on the long mooted question of the origin of property when the little professor of public law in your nursery is lecturing on it every day. Young hope is one of the most ripe and ready scholars in all that relates to descent and consanguinity. Your laws of primogeniture find no support in the enlightened forum of the nursery.

What a teacher is he, too, as to the value of time. He is no laggard sleeping on his rights and letting others sleep, too, when duty calls; but a wide awake citizen—intent on having things attended to betimes. When his mind is on a given subject, it is not apt to wander. He is bringing everybody up to time, and of putting his business through. He is marvellously in earnest when he sets his heart on anything which is entirely reasonable and scriptural. He is no believer in putting off and delaying, procrastination, especially when his wants are to be answered.

He has, too, naturally a taste for the exact sciences. He is quick to note the difference in size of oranges, cake and other dainties, however quadrangular, rhomboidal, or rectangular they may come before him, and has a natural affinity for the largest. Like the immortal Hudibras, he can take the size of most anything palatable that is set before him, and quickly determine whether it is more or less than he needs, and if more he is wanting weight.

But it is all futile to attempt to do justice to the teachings of the nursery, so all compact with the best wisdom of the world. It may truly be said that there have been very worthy people, who have managed to be really learned without sitting at the feet of a teacher in any kind, and drinking knowledge from his lips, but the case must be an exceptional one, and more in seeming than in reality. There is a great deal of mental currency passing from hand to hand, that will be found at last redeemable only where issued. But the wise sawe and modern instances of the nursery like the sweet verses of his immortal poets is good for all ages and for all climes.

To Cane Growers!

THE UNDERSIGNED, AGENTS FOR A Company who have in contemplation to erect a Sugar Mill and Works for the manufacture of sugar.

In or near Honolulu!

Should a sufficient quantity of cane be guaranteed, would be glad to enter from those parties who feel inclined to grow cane, that quantity they would be prepared to plant at once, to be delivered to the mill to be ground on shares, on the understanding that a mill would be ready before it was ripe.

All Communications

On this subject will be gladly attended to by the Undersigned. Details could be arranged and specific agreements drawn up and signed hereafter. In the meantime the total quantity of land that each party will be prepared to plant is required to be known, and it would be well for each party to state the very least quantity he would engage to plant, the quantity he would expect to plant, and the outside of this he would be likely to plant, also the exact place—here he would plant. Early attention is requested, as the time for planting is at hand.

Life Wasted.

Valuable lives are often thrown away—lost—through ignorance of some of the simplest truths of nature, or errors of judgment in matters where error becomes a crime. Some of the best and wisest and greatest men of our race have perished from the world, in consequence of what might be considered a carelessness, a recklessness, or an ignorance, which is amazing, as found in minds like theirs. The immediate cause of Lord Bacon's death was sleeping in a damp bed. Any old woman, who "didn't know B from bull's foot," would have had more sense than that. Yet it was the fatal error of the greatest mind of his age and generation.

Washington Irving, whose name is so loved and honored and revered, listened his death by taking the advice of a fool, instead of his physician. Albeit Lawrence, the financier and the philanthropist, brought on his last illness by an injudicious change of climate.

Rachel, the greatest tragic actress of her time, took a cold which carried her to her grave, by riding from New York to Boston in cars not sufficiently warmed, on a bitter cold winter's night, immediately after a performance, which had heated up her whole system, far beyond its natural standard. J. Addison Alexander, for whom it is claimed that he was the best Bible scholar living, and that he had powers of mind not equalled in his day, died in the very prime of life, because "having a feeling almost bordering on contempt for physicians," he allowed his mortal malady to prey upon him secretly; and the day he died, he thought he was going to get well. Because he knew nothing about disease, he concluded, with all his resplendent intellect, that men who had made it a life-long study, knew nothing about it. The magnificent deduction cost him his life. And now another name comes up to our notice, in the same connection, as illustrating the fact, that the greatest minds are capable of folios most amazing. The philosopher, the scholar, the soldier, and the Christian, were all blended in the name of Professor Mitchell, the great astronomer, the gallant soldier, and the resolute general. His was the greatest loss to the nation, up to this hour of the contest, and yet his life was literally thrown away, by his own inconsiderate act; by doing deliberately what we would suppose the commonest mind in the nation would have regarded as exceedingly dangerous; and it is named here to benefit the living, without prejudice to the honored and lamented dead. General Mitchell was attacked with symptoms of yellow fever; his physician acted promptly, and labored to restore the functions of the skin, to equalize the turning-point for life in that disease. It was eventually brought about, to the unspeakable joy of his medical attendant, Dr. Thomas T. Smiley, at 12 M., October 28, 1862; but when he returned, two hours later, his patient had been attacked with a chill, the pulse went up from 85 to 120, the General lay down, and up and ordered his bed changed, while in this perspiring condition. Delirium set in, and he died, the attending surgeon leaving this record: "I am of the opinion that had General Mitchell remained in bed, and kept the skin in good condition, he would without doubt have recovered."—Hall's Jour. of Health.

A Whisper to Daughters.

A married lady—and, consequently, one who has been there—offers the following advice: "Girls, before you decide to accept a man as your companion for life, look well to his recent merits. See if he hates anybody soundly. If so, you run a great risk in marrying him. A man who hates well, has not the qualities to make a good friend. A truly noble soul will never hate bitterly, even though deeply injured. He stands on too high ground. He may be deeply hurt, and much displeased; he may avoid one he knows to be an enemy, but he does not harbor bitter hatred in his soul. A noble mind is not always on the lookout for little offenses, but takes good-humoredly slight annoyances that are plenty enough in every one's pathway. Do not countenance a person who thinks to add to his importance by bustling at hotel servants, railroad employees, or whenever he feels it safe to do it. Instead of proving him a cosmopolitan, as he vainly thinks, his barking and snarling only shows his affinity to the puppy. Do not marry a woman if he ever so rich, hoping your influence will reform him. So to do it, a young man well reformed before he takes a step from which you can never recede while life lasts. It is an excellent sign for a young man if he is kind and attentive to his mother and sisters. Such a one will quite sure to make a good husband. There is something kind and genial and worth loving in a young fellow that all the children run to, if they wish to ask a favor—one the little girls are not afraid to ask to carry them across the muddy street—one the boys look to naturally to help them out of trouble with that plaguy kite—one who has a few minutes to put up a swing that shall furnish weeks of enjoyment to the little folks. Children are sharp observers of human nature, and depend upon it, a young man that all the children like, has something about him worth liking, whether he wear homespun or broad-cloth."
